User ratings are collected using various scales (usually 1 to 5 or 0 to 10); all ratings scales are translated to a standard 5-point scale before use in our calculations. Average product ratings are normalized for recency and volume of reviews. Scores are then translated from a 5-point scale to a 100-point scale.

Products can receive a maximum score of 100 on each axis. Products that meet a minimum score threshold for each axis are included as FrontRunners. The minimum score varies by category so that no more than 25 and no fewer than 10 products are included as FrontRunners. No product with a score less than 60 in either dimension is included in any FrontRunners graphic.

For products included, the Usability and Customer Satisfaction scores determine their positions on the FrontRunners graphic.
